CRAIG TOLLIVER KILLED

Tragic End of the Bloodiest Mountain Vendetta Known in History.

ROWAN COUNTY'S GANG ROUTED.

Four of the Kentucky Desperadoes Bite the Dust While Resisting the Sheriff .-- A Hard Fought

Battle. Dead Rentucky Desperadoes. LOUISVILLE, Ky., June 24 .- In Kentucky's shame, the lawless county of Rowan, was this morning enacted what will, beyond doubt, prove the final chapter in the bloodiest mountain vendetta known to the history of the state. The culmination was reached in the tragic end of four desperate men who forfeited their lives while resisting the mandates of the law. After the destruction of thousands of dollars worth of property, and up to this writing, the loss of twenty-one lives during the two years' continuance of the feud, Rowan county can now return to peace and prosperity. A special to the Cour rier-Journal from Lexington, Ky., gives the following account of the fight: "The news from Rowan county is of the most exciting a cork under water as to keep Swan down." kind, as it appears to be an indisputable fact that Craig Tolliver is killed and his gang dismembered forever. Sheriff Hogg. presumably acting under instructions from the state authorities, has been for about s week quietly organizing a very large posse of determined men in the upper part of Rowan county and in adjoining counties for the purpose of arresting Craig T. Olliver, or all the party who were implicated in the murder of the Logan boys some two weeks ago. T. Olliver and his party, consisting of about tep men, went heavily armed to meet every eastward bound train at the depot to search for suspicious characters and to see that no one got off at Morehead but those whom they desired. Sheriff Hogg equipped his large party with Winchester rifles and ammunition was secretly conveyed to his rendezvous while he was organizing the posse. It was finally determined to attempt the arrest of the assassins Wednesday, June 22, in the day time, to prevent any women, children or inoffensive citizens from being killed by accident. Accordingly, at an early hour this morning people living on the line of the railroad within two or three miles of Morehead on each side of town were notified to stop all trains and inform the conductors what was going on in so that passengers a nd would not be placed in Morehead danger. Sheriff Hogg's band of resolute men, numbering more than two hundred, appeared suddenly at Morehead about o'clock this morning. A cordon was first established around the entire town in the brush where the men could not be seen. The sheriff then entered town at the head of about 100 well armed men. Craig Tolliver and his ten followers immediately retreated to the Cottage hotel, which they had previously barrleaded in such a manner as to make it quite a formidable fortress. Sheriff Hogg then notified Tolliver that he had warrants for the arrest of all the men implicated in the killing of the Logan boys, and asked that they all submit peaceably to arrest under the law. Tolliver's reply was that neither he nor his men would be ar-take them. His party then opened fire upon the sheriff's posse. Quite a brisk battle of musketry ensued, and the fighting was kept up probably for two hours. The only casualty for a time was a flesh wound received by one of the sheriff's posse. The attacking party however, were gradually drawing their lines closer around Tolliver's fortification, and the besieged party, finding things growing too warm, anally concluded to make a bold rush for liberty, cut their way through the sheriff's lines, and take to the adjacent brush, which once reached would afford them secure escape. But as they made the rush they were met by a tremendous volley, which killed Craig Tolliver, Bud Tolliver, Jay Tolliver

This voiley wounded Cate Tolliver a twelve-year old boy, and three others, all of whom were captured except Cate Tolliver The other three also escaped, but one was captured afterwards. This brought the

CHEYENNE, Wyo., June 22 .- [Special Telegram to the BEE. |-Your correspondent is credibly informed that a movement is on foot for the organization of a beef packing and canning company of Colorado, Wyoming and Nebraska parties, with $10,000,000 capital. Omaha is to be the location of the packing and canning houses. Alex Swan is the prime mover. The whole project has been started since the assignment of Swan Bros., and in the face of that it has received promise of investment and support by foreign capitalists and stock growers of Colorado and Nebraska, who have unlimited faith in Swan's ability to make the enterprise a success. It is contemplated to make the institution the largest one in the world and successfully compete with Armour. Alex Swan was in terviewed to-day but refused to say anything except, "I am so busy settling matters connected with present business, I have no time to talk about anything else." #### THE FLAG BUSINESS.

A Decision by the Attorney General Rendered Last April. NEW YORK, June 22.-|Special Telegram to the BEE.]-The Tribune's Washington special says: There is substantial ground now to assert that before the tempest raised by the publication of the order for the surrender of the captured rebel flags, the war department, probably with the knowledge as it already had the consent of the president, began the execution of the order. There is reason to believe that a good many of the flags captured from Virginia regiments, particularly those captured from regiments which belonged to Fritz Hugh Lee's command, were turned over and taken to Virginia. Assertions to this effect are so positive and come from such trustworthy sources that they must be respected. It is difficult to believe that even under this administration the captured trophies which were the trophies of the United States government have been surreptiously surrendered to representatives of commands or states from which they were captured. It turns out on investigation that when application was made in behalf some of the heirs of the late General Lee fo the return of certain articles of personal property belonging to him which are de-posited in the National museum, the museum authorities brought the matter to the atten-tion of the president, and that after consid-ering it he concluded, on the advice of a tion of the president, and that after considering it he concluded, on the advice of a member of his cabinet, that the articles could not be given up to the claimants except by authority of congress. Certain member of the cabinet referred to above appears, according to the Sun's Washington dispatch, to be Attorney General Garland, who, in a letter of April 12, said that while the Lee articles were of little value the disparents. of April 12, said that while the Lee articles were of little value, the "uncertainty as to title would render the ultimate disposition of the property more properly within the range of congressional cognizance than that of the executive. I would, therefore, respectfully suggest that the status of the property as it now exists be maintained, and the subject of its final disposition be left to congress for its final consideration." This letter met and disposed of the very point involved in the controversy over the flags, and this too only a little more than two months before the flags. a little more than two months before the high order was issued. How it was possible for any officer of the government with this option before him to go wrong unwittingly is a great mystery. What is now needed is an t little more than two months before the flag explanation that explains.

Doings of the Convention at St. Louis

Yesterday. Sr. Louis, June 22 .- | Special Telegram to the BEE. |- The consideration of the proposed amendments to the constitution of the National Travelers' Protective association were yesterday made the special order for this morning and provoked the liveliest discussion. The greatest division of the day was upon the question of admitting the employers to membership in the association. This amendment was finally amended and adopted admitting them as honorary members only. The amendment to remove the national headquarters from Chicago to Washington, D. C., was lost. The amendment doing away with national committees and giving the president charge of their work, putting the president on a salary, was carried. The remainder of the day was spent on routine work. A banquet was given this evening at the Lindell hotel by the citizens, There were 350 plates set. Mayor Francis presided as toast master. The following were the toasts and Mayor Francis presided as toast master. The following were the toasts and responses: "Our Guests," M. S. Nollie, of Maryland, "Commerce," Senator G. G. National League.

Many Little Ones Saluted By Royalties in Hyde Park --- A Job Lot of Honors Conferred By Her Malesty.

DUBLIN, June 22 .- | New York Herald Ca ole-Special to the BEE. |- The jubilee was best celebrated here by a grand meeting of the National league. Never since has there been such a large attendance. Lord Mayer half of William O'Brien, apologized for the absence of the latter in consequence of the fatigue of his journey and medical necessity for rest. He could read the letter of Eugene Kelley to Parnell, dated June 7, enclosing $2,500. Lord Mayor Sullivan's address was filled with wise suggestions. Among other things he said: "I suppose we may all regard this as a jubilee meeting. We are not without getting a jubilee present of the coercion bill. We have a very handsome jubilee present to-day from our friends in America, whom most heartily and sincerely we thank, I had a little invitation to be present elsewhere as lord mayor of Dublin, but I preferred to be where I am, amongst my own people and doing my humble best to stand by them and share whatever trouble, risk or sacrifice might be before us. To-day about the streets of Dublin we see bunting waving in the preeze, but there is another flag waving today in Ireland, which may not be visible to the naked eye, floating proudly over the Irish people and nation, and that is In London is a display of fireworks, but it seems to me that there is another exhibition of light flame that, if reproduced in that city, would add to the interest of the occasion, and that would be, if in Picadilly circus a representation had been got up of the flaming cabins of Genbeigh. There are coming also near London the military maneuvres, re view, sham fight, etc. In like manper it representation was got up of the siege of Bodyke. I am proud of the fight that was made there for the houses and in self defense. I rejoice at the fact that it required the presence of a small army in order to carry out those evictions. I hope for the future in all parts of Ireland where villages or numbers of people are to be evicted that affairs will also be so arranged that the presence of a small army shall be necessary in order to get these people out of their homes. Gentlemen, I am decidedly against a foolish collission with the armed forces of the crown. I think it would be a highly improper and foolish procedure. But, on the other hand, I am in favor of decidedly offering resistance on those occasions and of making these operations so difficult that it will be necessary, in order to preserve the peace, that the British government will be compelled to go to the trouble and expense of bringing down to those scenes a large force famous tea taxation bill did for the New of military. I do not think it if, on the raising of the little tinger of a bailiff, they were to walk with heads down out of their homes. The time was when that without a show of resistance and nothing but tears in their eyes, walked out of their little cabins at the bidding, almost uncomplainedly, to drift into the workhouses or by the roadside. However, if the order of things that took place at Bokyke had been acted on in those days, we would have had a very different tale to-day in Ireland. There would not have been so many clearances, so many little ered an outrage it is our duty as well as interest to condemn. Resistance is one thing, even if it was carried to an extreme. Still manly resistance in open day the English and Irish people understand. But what neither English nor right minded Irish people can outrage." The applause here was vivid. Resuming the lord mayor continued: "We face the future with a brave, stou heart. We tell the government to do their best with their new coercion act. If they endeavor to suppress the National league, we know the history of the country. Such proceedings will never be achieved. The object of the coercion bill is to put down free speech, free writing and combination amongst the tenants against rack renting and oppression, but I say we are resolved to do our best to in sure that all these things shall, aye shall, go on in Ireland despite the coercion act; and if all other organizations are to be persecuted and suppressed, there is one great organization which will be ready to take their place, and that is the organiza tion of the Irish parliamentary party. Let us see how the British government propose to deal with such an organization. On jubi lee day, at this crisis and this moment, we pledge ourselves anew to the Irish national cause, and declare our readiness and determination to stand by that cause, despite whatever this tyrannical tory government may have in store for us," When Sullivan, without passion but with his face as pale, doubtless, as once was that of Henry, or Otis, or Samuel Adams, in 1776 in America, pronounced this epilogue, while many applauded, the faces of most present who remained silent became studies in the resolution that flashed from eye or were unmistakably manifested by nervous folding up of hands and arms. His speech would be a good piece for the Iriah boys to speak at school. Then a stillness for an instant passed over the assemblage of 200 delegates until Olilon, pale, but cool, arose, He gave a succinct sketch of the workings of the plan of campaign; how you prevent landlords reoccupying their expenses and costs in evictions, as used to be the case, and how it secured to the evictors support without public charity or absolute penury, as formerly was the case; how the plan was practically evicting the landlords of the enjoyment of their land. His entire speech would fill nearly a page. Next Harrington said: "I am asked from America and everywhere, what are we going to do against this coercion bill. There is a general impression that we ought to issue manifesto to the Irish people directing then how they should meet the bill. I wish to point out to friends that we are perfectly prepared to meet the act inch by inch, but that [here he spoke with marked deliberation] we do not by any means consider it the wisest course that early in the struggle we should tell our opponents how it is. We are going to fight it. Some think it would be a wise issue to call the Irish people to give no evidence at any secret inquiries under the act. You may depend u-p-o-n i-t t-h-e-r-e i-s n-o n-e-e-d o-f The applause and shouts that greeted these words of import can be better imagined than described. Then, with cheers for Gladstone, O'Brien, Parnell and Eugene Keily, the league adjourned. These utterances deserve marked attention because it is well understood that Messrs. Sullivan, Dillon and Harrington, although speaking for themselves, spoke what the caucus of Irish members of parliament had considered and agreed upon with the approbation of the Gladstonians in parliament.

Children Enjoy a Fete in Hyde Park

-Honors Conferred. London, June 22.-At the children's fete in honor of the queen to-day at Hyde Park, 3,000 little ones were present. Arrayed on the great lawn they made a pretty picture. The Prince and Princess of Wales and sons and daughters, accompanied by a number of royal guests, visited the park during the fete. The children at once freed themselves from restraint, broke the rope barriers, rushed pell mell toward the visitors and packed themselves in solid groups around them. All etiquette vanished. The princes and princesses, who seemed delighted at their position, mixed among the children with perfect freedom and pleasure. The queen soon arrived. The children massed themselves in an orderly manner on both sides of the road over which her majesty's carriage passed and moved with it toward the stand, the assembled bands playing the national anthem, which the children sang witn grand effect. The queen reached and ascended the platform while the music was proceeding. At its conclusion she presented a memorial cup to a little girl, who had been selected to represent all the children assemselected to represent all the children assem-bled. When the queen departed the whole assembly sang "Rule Brittania." Mrs. Glad-stone, Lord Derby and Lord Spencer were

The Omahas and Lincolns met again yesterday afternoon, and the Omahas were very badly defeated-in fact, next to annihi-

The score was 14 to 3! The Lincolns won hands down, and the game was devoid of either interest or enthusiasm.

The Waterloo of the Omahas can be explained in four words: Weakness in the box. However, young Healy was not the only one to blame-not by a long odds; for the Omahas played a slovenly game all around. And they fell with a dull, sickening thad! Healy, who was a glant of strength the other day against the Kansas City sluggers, other day against the Kansas City singgers, was a pigmy in the hands of Dave Rowe's ballet dancers. They tound his delivery apparently wherever they wanted it, and the way they sent the ball a-whizzing to all parts of the field was a caution.

The umpire was there, too.

Yes, Deacle! He made Healy fairly split the plate with the school of the plate with the scho the plate with the sphere, or it was a ball, dead certain.

The crowd didn't care whether he laid down to-day or not, but they tried to hoot him to death.

They might as well have thought of dam-aging the Niagara by thrusting their feet before the waters.

But it is to be hoped that the management hereafter, if they must have Mr. Deagle present at the games, will keep him well in the mellow chiaroscuro of the utter background.

Give us one of those umpires, just once, we hear of so often and see so never.

Then we'll die happy.
In the first inning Swirt and Walsh both went out to first, Dwyer, however, made his base on a fumble by Lang, but was caught trying to steal second.
Hall, for the Lincolns, hit safe to center and stele second. Beskiev was glyen a life

For the Lincolns old man Dolan smacked the globe for three bags, and ran home after Herr's long fly was exquisitely caught by Genins after a long and hard run. Toohey got first on a second frightful muff by Dwyer, but was killed endeavoring to steal the nett bag. Hart then struck a high foul which Dwyer took in magnificent shape running at the top of his speed with his back to the audience.

The Omahas broke the ice in the following inning. Genins hit sate to left, but was caught at second: Healy fanned out, and then Swift at second: Healy fanned out, and then Swift made a two-bagger, and came home on a wild throw by Lang of Walsh's hit. In the fourth they retired in order, but in the fifth and sixth each added another taily to their slim total. After this they failed to score, so clean and faultless was the fielding of the Lincolns, and so effective the pitching of Hart. In the fourth Shaeffer hit safe, and Rowe went to first on a fumble of his hit by short, Shaeffer going to second. Dolan drove both in by a two sacker. Toohey struck out, Herr in by a two sacker. Toohey struck out, Herr retired at first, but Dolan reached third. He was caught napping here, however, by Krehmeyer and run down. They scored again in the fifth, and in the sixth piled up again in the fitth, and in the sixth biled up no less than six runs in this way. Shaeffer made first on a fumble of Rourke's, Rowe fouled out, but Dolan hit safe to center, and Shaeffer took second. Toobey's long hit to Bartson was then miserably muffed and more miserably thrown in, the four pairs of white stockings comments in the four pairs of white stockings coming in on the two errors. Toohey making the complete circuit. Hart then got to first on a muff, stole second, and scored on Hall's safe hit and Hall on Buckley's. Lang flow out to first. In the seventh flowe tallied on his own single, a pass ball, Hart's two bagger, and two outs, and in the eighth Beckley made the final score on a muff by Bartson, Lang's hit, and an out.

But why continue the harrowing tale.

HELD CRIMINALLY NEGLIGENT.

The Coroner's Jury Holds the Engineer Responsible For Byron's Death.

THE CASE FULLY INVESTIGATED

Conroy Arrested and a Preliminary Examination to Be Held-A Farewell Reception at Fremont-Nebraska News.

The Engineer Responsible. Lincoln, Neb., June 22.- Special to the BEE. -The death of Michael Byron in the collision between a Union Pacific freight train and a B. & M. yard engine last evening occupied the attention of the coroner and a coroner's jury to-day. J. J. Conroy, the engineer of the B. & M. yard engine, was arrested and held in the custody of the officers to answer to causing the death of Byron through neglect on his part and open violation of the rules laid down for his government in operating his engine. The coroner's investigation, commenced last night, was not concluded until noon to-day, when a verdict was reached. The testimony taken was voluminous and exhaustive, a large crowd being in attendance during the inquest, and some fifteen witnesses being rigidly questioned as afteen withesees being rigidity questioned as to the accident. The facts—were that the B. & M. yard engine coming from West Lincoln to the city at 6:30 p. m. neglected to whistle and stop at the point—where the Union Pacific track crosses the B. & M. track, and from this neglect the B. & M. engine crashed into a moving freight on the Union Pacific, attion a moving freight on the Union Pacific, attiting Byron, who was riding on the foot board of the water tank of the B. & M. yard engine. Several other parties were on the engine who saved themselves by jumping but Byron was caught and crushed into a shapeless mass. At this crossing the Union Pacific trains moving north have the right of Pacific trains moving north have the right of way and the engineer of the Union Pacific freight expected momentarily to see the B. & M. stop, so when a collision became inevitable it was too late for him to act. Conroy, the engineer on the B. & M. yard engine, admitted his neglect of blowing the whistie and coming to a full stop before this crossing. He testified that it was the fireman's duty to keep watch at that point, and, depending on him, he did not discover the moving Union Pacific freight until close at hand. He reversed his engine, but as it was not working racine freight until close at hand. He reversed his engine, but as it was not working well, he could not control it in time to prevent the accidents. A number of witnesses confirmed the question of neglect in observing the rules at the crossing, and the rules were fully explained to the jury. The speed at which the switch engine was runned. ning was testined to with a good deal of dis-crepency, the rules allowing only a speed of six miles an hour, but the prependerance of testimony was that the speed was at least that rate when the engines approached each other. The verdict as rendered by the coroner's Jury held Conroy responsible for Byron's death. In Judge Parker's court in the alternoon Corroy was brought up to answer to the charge of gross negligence and swer to the charge of gross negligence and the preliminary examination was postponed a day awaiting a post mortem examination of Byron.

Doings at Doane. CRETE, June 22 - | Special to the BEE.]-At the meeting of the trustees, held Tuesday afternoon, Mr. A. B. Tukey, of Omaha, and Rev. L. F. Berry, of Fremont, were elected trustees in place of Rev. L. Burnham and Rev. A. T. Swing, resigned. It was voted to authorize the executive committee to lease or sell a portion of the land now owned by the college, the proceeds of such leases or sales to be invested for per-manent endowment only. Not more than eighty acres are now to be disposed of. The land specified lies on the north side of the college section, and is very desirable for city lots. This action of the trustees is in the right direction. Such disposal of lands will be a help to Crete, opening as it does a set of lots so desirable for city improvement. The income of the invested funds will also, aside from the permanent increase of these.

aside from the permanent increase of the enaside from the permanent increase of the endowment, be of material aid in meeting the present needs of the college.

At the meeting of the trustees this morning it was voted that the treasurer be directed to open an account to be known as "the sinking fund," the object of which shall be to provide for the extinguishment of the existing debt of $20,000 to the Nash estate. It was voted also that the Knowles be-prest of $5,000, immediately available, be carried to that account.
